Distinguished Speaker Series with Maisha T. Winn, PhD

Justice on Both Sides: Toward a Restorative Justice Discourse in Schools

education.ucdavis.edu/winn

Professor Winn will discuss the ways restorative justice practices have the potential to change language and practices in urban schools.

Professor Winn's program of research examines the intersections of language, literacy, and youth justice. She is the Susan J. Cellmer Distinguished Chair in English Education and Professor of Language and Literacy in the Department of Curriculum and Instruction at the University of Wisconsin, Madison, and the author of Writing in Rhythm: Spoken word poetry in urban schools; Black Literate Lives: Historical and Contemporary Perspectives; Girl Time: Literacy, Justice, and the School-to-Prison Pipeline; and co-editor of Humanizing Research: Decolonizing Qualitative Research (with Django Paris).
